HONGKONG, MAY 21st, 1894.

The fact that the motion for the strict enforcement of the Treaties has been rejected by the Japanese House of Representatives will be hailed with satisfaction by all friends of the Land of the Rising Sun. It was on the question of strict Treaty enforcement that the diet was dissolved on the 30th December last. The opposition had placed on the orders of the day a motion recommending the strict enforcement of the treaties, the object being to have all privileges as to residence outside Treaty limits withdrawn and the position of foreigners in Japan rendered as irksome as possible. Some of the advocates of this policy claim that they are not actuated by an anti-foreign spirit, but that they regard the step as calculated to force a Treaty revision. However this may be it seemed in the last Diet that the opposition were likely to carry their point, but the Government frustrated their intentions by a dissolution.

Mr. Murro, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, making a notable speech just before the dissolution, in which he enunciated the Government's foreign policy. It may be interesting at the present juncture to recall the leading features of that speech, to which reference was made in the column at the time. Mr. Murro referred to the progress Japan has made during the period of foreign intercourse, to the remarkable growth of her trade, the increase in her military strength, the extension of civil liberty, the growth of intelligence, and the progress of science and art. The Government's policy, he said, was to open the country, whereas the movement he was combatting, if not actually an anti-foreign movement, was at least a reversion to the isolation policy of the Bakufu, a policy incompatible with the national and fundamental programme of opening the country, as followed ever since the Restoration. Combating the argument that treaty revision could be forced on by the movement under notice, Mr. Murro expressed the belief that such policy measures and such a small party would be totally ineffectual to accomplish that object. "In fact," he proceeded, "in order to accomplish the object of treaty revision it is necessary to furnish foreign powers with proofs that Japan's progress and civilization truly make her in Asia an exceptionally enlightened and powerful country. The evidences hitherto given to foreign Powers that Japan is a State quite exceptional in Asia are the results which she has attained by following, ever since the Restoration, a national policy of opening the country." The speaker expressed his aspiration for treaty revision, but he said Japan must look to enter the family of civilized and powerful nations by observing the rules of reciprocal courtesy and respect which constitute the tie that binds that family together. This speech seems to have had its effect on the majority of the new House of Representatives that negatived the principle of strict enforcement of the treaties, though by what majority we have not learnt. Probably the majority was not a very large one. The Asi, in a forecast it published a short time ago of the course of events during the present session, estimated that on this particular question four or five independent members would turn the scale. Whatever its majority, however, the Government has scored a victory on what Mr. Murro termed "the great fundamental policy of the Empire." It is gratifying to find that the anti-foreign feeling, though strong, is not held by the majority of the national representatives during Mr. Murro's leave in this country, and among the representatives who are in the majority, while there is no appreciable change of the disease world, he advised that no further danger need be anticipated. A certain section of the Chinese have not, however, attempted to frustrate all these efforts and are determined to assert grossly the ignorance and simplicity which peculiarly belong to the multitude of the masses. It will be remembered that one of the first acts of the permanent committee was to order the removal of all patients from the Tang-Wah Hospital to the Hygieia, and the next physician who was posted to the Hygieia, and their treatment by Western skill and science. It appears that this feeling of resentment has been increasing during the past few days, and on Saturday it broke bounds and completely disorganized the work of cleaning, disinfecting, and instituting the hygienic course, the patients who were treated in the Tang-Wah Hospital, with the rest of the patients, were removed to the Hygieia, and their treatment by Western skill and science. It appears that this feeling of resentment has been increased by the speech of Sir H. M. Finn, Envoy Extraordinary to Japan, in which he said, "The Japanese Minister in Japan was the author of any proposal on the subject of the revision of the foreign treaties with Japan, on his recent return to that country, to be informed." The British Government has not made any proposal during Mr. Murro's leave in this country, and among the representatives who are in the majority, while there is no appreciable change of the disease world, he advised that no further danger need be anticipated.

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY,
WITH THE PUSTI AND MANDARIN
PRONUNCIATION.
An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.
For comprehensiveness and practical service this work is unequalled. It contains all the words which the Chinese have later on been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, as well as its extensive. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for the student of a most instructive nature. Both the English and Chinese parts are printed in the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space. The characters are cleaned so previously that they do not interfere with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work—the following facts are submitted for consideration—
Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Macmillan's English and Chinese Dictionary about 160,000, whilst this work contains about 600,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Arsin's 36-page list of all the grammar and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various significations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is incomplete, that a reference to it may enable a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect it is widely inferior to the English-Chinese Dictionaries, and the author makes no claim for himself that it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Publishers of SIX or more Copies.
